

Abstract

A barge with a water turbine is anchored in a river. The turbine is immersed in the water between two separated hulls. Water is directed to flow in a concentrated state between the hulls, turning the turbine and generating electricity.

5